

I can't help but notice that out of the presidential candidates on the Republican side so far, three are non-white. Vivek Ramaswamy and Nikki(Nimrata) Haley are both South Asian while Tim Scott is black. Fortunately, there's no chance any of these three will be the nominee. However, the GOP would love to be seen as anything other than the white party. Hence, the GOP elevates its small number of non-whites on an affirmative action basis.

Retarded masses of tv watching fools would be mostly inconsequential if they weren't given equal voting power. Universal suffrage is madness.

We can't change human nature and we can't raise the iq of the retarded masses without a strict eugenics program, but we absolutely CAN create a government and policies that accounts for the fact that most people in this country are fish-brained mongoloids that can hardly tie their shoes.

I think the important part here is you cannot change human nature. These differences and divisions are real.

We have bet the future of our children n the lie in the sky dream these divisions that have existed for time immemorial will suddenly vanish, and they won't.

- We either choose to find an endless battle against human nature.

Or

- We accept human differences and built our governments and policies that account for those differences. Meaning we quit trying to stuff the whole world into one government.

((they don't want you noticing)))

Then we told them
